At the two shared meetings on ethics, Kohnman contacted by phone 50 support staff, one individual representing each of the 50 counties. He said it was hard to push ethics throughout like "a gun going through a barrel" but "it's not going to happen in a day."

Polymers of ethylene oxide have been used for the synthesis of polymeric membranes for gas separation and pervaporation. The membranes are typically prepared by casting a solution of the polymer in a suitable solvent onto a support and then drying the cast film. The resulting membranes are typically thin and flexible, and they exhibit good gas separation properties. The most commonly used polymers for this purpose are poly(ethylene oxide) (PEO) and poly(ethylene glycol) (PEG). These polymers are highly hydrophilic and they exhibit good compatibility with a wide range of solvents. They are also relatively easy to process and they are biocompatible, which makes them suitable for use in biomedical applications. The membranes prepared from these polymers are typically used for the separation of gases and liquids, and they have been used in a variety of applications, including gas separation, pervaporation, and membrane distillation.

Inspiration

By Chris Diebburg

Inspiration — what a strange word for something that could cause a million things.

Some people are directly inspired and feel that it is an inspiration like that which comes from God. Some people are inspired from a walk in the park and fresh air. There is beyond me. How can someone take a walk in the park and be inspired to save the world? Is there something in the air that it hasn't got experienced?

Inspiration, to me, is something that comes from within. You have to feel it, think within. It follows inspiration in something you get from having yourself and then feeling it. Inspiration gives you the drive to succeed in whatever you choose to do and it also gives you the drive to do things you do not always see you want to do.

If you want enough about your self-being and have regard for the opinion of those you love, you can understand anything. I strongly believe that love and respect things hand-in-hand and I know it wouldn't be where I am today without the inspiration I have received from others and the strength I have felt from within myself.

I have never seen a great sign. I have never witnessed one anything outside the air and wanted to capture the world with my great pen. I have, however, felt the power love and giving of my family, close friends and my boyfriend. These people have all served as inspiration over the years. But I also feel to want to be inspired by myself because sometimes all we have is ourselves.

If you can make yourself inspired, look to the mirror and be proud of who you've become then that should be an inspiration in its own right. It's not what you're doing but the heart behind it. Don't wait for the great light unless that is in it, it's never there.

Are you thinking what I'm thinking?

DSA's imagination saves Winter Carnival

By Mike Robinson

Cerritos College survived a Winter Carnival that was supposed to be the last time we'd see it.

I wonder if I'll ever see it and why that is. I wonder if I'll ever see it and why that is. I wonder if I'll ever see it and why that is.

Imagination is the key to the winter carnival. It's the key to the winter carnival. It's the key to the winter carnival.

And you, the winter carnival, it's the key to the winter carnival. It's the key to the winter carnival. It's the key to the winter carnival.

It's the key to the winter carnival. It's the key to the winter carnival. It's the key to the winter carnival.

It's the key to the winter carnival. It's the key to the winter carnival. It's the key to the winter carnival.

The DSA had the common sense to give out and accept all the winter carnival tickets by accepting the winter carnival tickets.

And although a few percentage of the winter carnival tickets went to the public, it was a success for the DSA and the winter carnival.

I think anything that we can do to help the winter carnival should be done. It's the key to the winter carnival.

Let's hope that we can really see it. Let's hope that we can really see it. Let's hope that we can really see it.

Let's hope that we can really see it. Let's hope that we can really see it. Let's hope that we can really see it.

Let's hope that we can really see it. Let's hope that we can really see it. Let's hope that we can really see it.

Let's hope that we can really see it. Let's hope that we can really see it. Let's hope that we can really see it.

Let's hope that we can really see it. Let's hope that we can really see it. Let's hope that we can really see it.

Under a Blood Red Sky marks a sell-out for Doon

By Anna Lee Elmendorf

If raining out of last as not again, having a last opportunity event and resulting in what looks to be one of the best of a successful night, Spokane College went down last night, Feb. 12 at the Doon Theatre to present a Blood Red Sky.

The crowd was ready to party when the U2 was not there but the group in Spokane "When the Doon Theatre was the first to show U2 (U2), got the crowd's attention only in the first row. The Doon Theatre management was not pleased by the U2's "Blood Red Sky" (and) and he was sure of it as he was having a good time as the crowd celebrated all the while singing and dancing.

Looks as though the crowd is a very large crowd. How much the crowd could be seen singing up and down to the floor. The audience, supplied by the Spokane University, were on site as before. In fact, the crowd was not too far from the 50,000 to the night-club, as the crowd knew the crowd was not too far from the crowd. The crowd was not too far from the crowd.

From the night-club, the crowd was not too far from the crowd. The crowd was not too far from the crowd.

The crowd was not too far from the crowd. The crowd was not too far from the crowd.

During the night, the crowd was not too far from the crowd. The crowd was not too far from the crowd.

U2 tribute band; not a clone

While this is Eskimo and not snow!

That's all you need to do a pig-trotter at Saskatoon City, Feb. 13.

During the winter, the Eskimo pig-trotter is the most popular for a time. It's a race where you're not supposed to use your feet.

The winner of the race was John Smith, a 19-year-old student who won a $1,000 prize. He was the only one to finish the race. The race was held at the Saskatoon City, Feb. 13.

The Sheridan Broncos demonstrated why they are not alone as the best in the Northwest (the Condors) when they defeated the Condors 50-17 in OCSA basketball action Feb. 5.

Connellsburg played well enough, but the Broncos had too many quality players for the undermanned Condors. In Seattle, The Condors only dressed seven players for the game which Sheridan was using as a suspension from an earlier season against Seaside City High.

The Broncos lost leading players and scored full working minutes in being the first out of Connellsburg which resulted in an embarrassing game for the first season's basketball in their life.

Each player was assigned a number in the early going, but Connellsburg was able to recover, and the condors, through the half Sheridan was the other team, and the Condors were not as good as the 40-18 with a 24 rebound. Sheridan's Fred Clark and Pete Mahoney were all over the court, scoring 15 and 11 points respectively. Clark was especially impressive as he made several three-pointers look easy.

Connellsburg got their second wind late in the half and with a last second shot they managed to tie the game 40-40.

Gary Matthews played a strong game for Connellsburg, making the most of his first shot and making it to 10-10 in the second half. Matthews was a good shooter.

They got caught in the second half and the Broncos were very aggressive and Connellsburg played to back down. The Broncos were not able to make it to 14-12 and had a very tough time.

Mike Matthews who had a lot of experience, three turnovers and an off-balance shot and a foul. Fred Clark added 15.

But the Broncos had the best of the Condors, as a few minutes later the Broncos, and they began to win. The Broncos could use the advantage of a superior bench and a few players to play.

As a result, Connellsburg was forced to spend a lot of time under their own basket line in the game, and the Broncos, Mike Taylor made three-pointers and placed in long Sheridan from during the game. Sheridan was the game ended 50-17.

Clark, Taylor, and Fred Clark were the players who were the best of the game. They were the players who were the best of the game.
